Research support
Librarians are your personal link to the Library. They provide customized support for your research with one-on-one consultations. To contact your subject specialist, visit: library.ubc.ca/subjectlibrarians

Scholarly communications
As a scholar, author and/or editor you have a key role to play in scholarly communications. To learn more about how to manage your copyright, retain your rights as an author, make your publications open access and maximize the impact of your research, visit: scholcomm.ubc.ca

cIRcle cIRcle is UBC’s digital repository for research and teaching materials created by the UBC community, openly accessible to anyone online. cIRcle welcomes research and teaching materials from faculty and staff – increase exposure to your work while retaining copyright: circle.ubc.ca

Licenses and you
Check out UBC’s Digital Classroom FAQs or email copyright.services@ubc.ca for assistance in using internet materials for educational purposes.

The Library licenses many electronic resources from publishers, such as eBooks, eJournals, image databases and streaming media. Check the permitted uses from the Library’s License Information Database before you use materials: licenses.library.ubc.ca

Research data management
The Library provides valuable information and resources related to UBC’s research data management strategy. If you are producing, reusing, or interested in preserving and sharing your research data, visit: researchdata.library.ubc.ca

Learning support for students
The Chapman Learning Commons provides tutoring, writing support and peer academic coaching services for undergraduate students. Students can receive subject-specific coaching, technology help, academic advising and more. learningcommons.ubc.ca

The Canaccord Learning Commons provides support for all Sauder students – including MBAs, MM ECM and all other degree programs – with learning support services and opportunities to hone the skills that will make them successful at Sauder and in the working world. learningcommons.sauder.ubc.ca

The Koerner Library Research Commons offers services for graduate students from all faculties, including support for thesis formatting, citation management tools, SPSS and NVivo; a workshop series; labs with various GIS and statistical software, and more. koerner.library.ubc.ca

Open Collections
The Library’s Open Collections include digital photos, books, newspapers, maps, videos, theses and more. Collectively, they document a diverse range of people, places and events, and are constantly growing to reflect the research interests of the UBC community and beyond. Take your research to the next level: open.library.ubc.ca

Course integrated instruction
Librarians can collaborate with you to produce course-specific and/or assignment-specific research guides, create online tutorials or deliver in-person or online instruction sessions. To contact your subject specialist, visit: library.ubc.ca/subjectlibrarians

Flexible learning
To enhance learning outcomes for students while offering greater access to resources and services, the Library provides faculty with a variety of supports to develop flexible learning classroom environments. These include digital collections, discipline-specific research and instructional support, copyright services and much more. Learn how the Library can support your flexible learning classroom: about.library.ubc.ca

The Faculty Information Literacy Toolkit includes tips for developing research assignments, resources that assist in developing student research skills, an information literacy checklist and more. Visit: about.library.ubc.ca/teaching

Copyright
Copyrighted materials are everywhere - you produce them, and you use them, everyday.

What you can and can’t do under copyright law is essential knowledge for all UBC faculty, staff and students - both as responsible global citizens, and as responsible teachers, researchers and students. Infringing copyright is a serious matter, but the Library is here to help.

Find information about copyright law, UBC’s requirements and contact information for the team of professionals who can assist you: copyright.ubc.ca
